The ROH, NHS Foundation Trust, commissioned Glancy Nicholls Architects to deliver a New Outpatients Department and new entrance focal point, which will offer their patients and visitors the best possible experience and care during their visit.

This project is the first step in delivering their vision of the highest levels of care designed around the needs of the patients, carers, visitors and staff. The new development has been designed to reflect the changing healthcare needs of the community and will improve access to the whole hospital, as well as delivering an improved patient experience in a contemporary, relaxed and efficient working environment.
